

Price of Portuguese Industrial Ethernet 2-core Fiber Optic Cable Splice Box

AI Overview

The price of a 2-core industrial fiber optic splice box typically ranges from $10 to $50 per unit, depending on features, materials, and environmental protection. Overview Industrial fiber optic splice boxes are designed to protect, organize, and manage fiber optic connections in harsh environments. They are commonly used in FTTH, FTTx, and industrial networks, supporting fusion splicing and patching with SC, LC, or FC adapters. The boxes are made from durable materials like ABS or PC+ABS, offering UV resistance, waterproofing, and dustproofing, often rated IP65/IP66 for outdoor and indoor use. Pricing Factors The cost of a 2-core fiber optic splice box depends on several factors: Material and Durability: High-strength, UV-resistant, or waterproof enclosures cost more than basic plastic boxes. Environmental Rating: IP65/IP66-rated boxes for outdoor use are more expensive than indoor-only models. Capacity and Features: Boxes with integrated splice trays, cable management guides, or space for optical splitters increase the price. Connectors and Adapters: Inclusion of SC, LC, or FC adapters, or pre-installed pigtails, can raise the cost. Brand and Certification: CE-certified or industrial-grade boxes from reputable manufacturers may be priced higher. Typical Price Range Basic 2-core splice boxes: $10-$20 per unit for simple indoor models with minimal protection. Industrial-grade 2-core boxes: $25-$50 per unit for IP65/IP66-rated, UV-resistant, and waterproof enclosures suitable for outdoor or harsh environments. Custom or pre-terminated assemblies: Prices can exceed $50 if the box includes factory-installed connectors, armored protection, or specialized environmental sealing. Additional Considerations When purchasing, consider: Installation requirements: Wall or pole mountable options simplify deployment. Future expansion: Some boxes allow additi...
